Charity begins at home is a proverb that Ram Mehta knows all too well having observed his parents give to the less fortunate all his life while growing up in Delhi, India.

Now the 43-year old part-owner of In-Fretta pizza in Plano, Texas is giving back to his community during the COVID-19 pandemic and credits his late mother Lata Mehta for his charitable actions.

Mehta and business partner Hanif Islam, 36, are giving away enough food once a week to feed at least 1,500 people, even though their restaurant has seen a decrease of sales by as much as 80 per cent since early March.

'The day we opened our doors in September 2018 we offered a free cheese pizza to a family or two slices to individuals who couldn't afford to eat,' Mehta exclusively told Dailymail.com. 'At that time, we were giving away about 100 pizzas a week for free.'

Now since the coronavirus has hit Texas as well, with people losing their jobs and businesses closing they've decided to become more charitable by digging into their savings to do so.

Islam said their restaurant used to bring in about $125,000 a month in gross sales, but now they are not bringing in anywhere near that amount.

'Our rent alone is $12,000 a month, we have food costs, salaries, we are now bringing in enough money to barely scrape by and pay the bills.

'We've had to cut back on some of our employees' hours and had to layoff a few dishwashers, we are just trying to stay afloat like the next guy,' said Mehta.

'Despite what's going on in the world every week we bake at least 400 cheese pizzas other times we make pasta dishes for them to be given to local shelters or churches to feed the hungry,' said Hanif.

To make that many pizzas at such a time is no small feat. It takes about four hours to bake them all. They stay on a large area on top of the oven and in warming bags to keep the baked pizzas warm. After the pizzas are done a local charity or shelter stops by and picks them up and distributes them to the needy.

Mehta says it costs about $5,000 a week out of their savings to make pizzas for the 1500 people, 'We'll do it as long as we can, we have saved some money for a rainy day and our restaurants are bringing in just enough money to pay our employees and keep the lights on.'

Islam said since President Trump has extended social distancing guidelines until April 30, they don't know how much longer they can continue with donating food for 1,500 people each week. 'We'll do it as long as we can, as long as we have the money, we'll do it.'

'Not only are our pizza's free they are great tasting, they are authentic NY style pizza, best outside of NY,' added Mehta.

According to In-Fretta's Facebook, in May 2019 comedian Jay Leno dropped by their restaurant after craving some NY style pizza.

Leno was in Dallas shooting and was missing authentic pizza so he was recommended In-Fretta Parkwood by one of his producers. He drove all the way there from Dallas and loved the pizza, according to the pizzeria.

Mehta who has lived in the Dallas areas since 2013 said he and his three other business partners stand out in the Republican mostly white community, 'there is a Sikh, Muslim, Christian and Hindu, I've learned to love Texas and especially Plano. I now truly feel Texas is my home. The community made us, it's now time to give back.'
